

Capacities of repeater-assisted quantum communications

Stefano Pirandola

We bound the ultimate rates for distributing secret keys via quantum repeaters, from the basic scenario of a single repeater chain to an arbitrarily-complex quantum network, where systems may be routed through single or multiple paths. We establish the end-to-end capacities under fundamental noise models, including optical loss.