

Efficient generation and manipulation of photons with single molecules

Stephan Götzinger

MPL Erlangen

I will first discuss our efforts to deterministically generate single photons by using planar dielectric antennas. In the second part I will present experiments where photons and single molecules strongly interact. A single molecule can amplify a weak laser beam and generate nonlinear effects like three-photon amplification and four-wave mixing.